When The Earth Quakes
The intensity of an earthquake is determined by a measure called the Richter scale. An earthquake measuring 4.0 is considered _minor_, causing little, if any, harm. One measuring 8.0 is more than one thousand times as powerful and can do immense damage. Another measure of the destructive power of an earthquake is the number of lives lost. One of the greatest natural disasters in history was the earthquake that struck China in 1556, killing almost a million people.
Earthquakes do the greatest damage in urban areas where people are concentrated. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 measured 8.3 and killed 450 people; in 1964, Alaska, which is more sparsely settled, also experienced an earthquake measuring 8.3, but there were fewer than 200 deaths.
Scientists who investigate the causes of earthquakes are called seismologists. They have learned a great deal about these frightening occurrences. But unfortunately, we still do not know enough about earthquakes to be able to predict accurately when one will occur. We do, however, make sure that today’s buildings and bridges are strong enough to stand up to them. That is one reason why the 1989 San Francisco earthquake, which measured 6.9 on the Richter scale, took so few lives.
When the earthquake strikes, most people might flee to the nearest open space. Experts tell us, however, that if you are in a modern building, it is probably safer to stay inside. Look for shelter under a sturdy table or in a doorway.
46. What do seismologists do?
(A) They report damages done by earthquakes.
(B) They help people flee to open space when earthquakes strike.
(C) They investigate the causes of earthquakes.
(D) They build buildings and bridges sturdy enough to withstand earthquakes.

47. What is the meaning of minor as it is used in the narrative?
(A) small in size    (B) serious    (C) terrible    (D) strong

48. In what kind of areas is an earthquake likely to do the least damage?
(A) urban areas
(B) open areas with fewer people
(C) cities with many old and flimsy buildings
(D) places where people are more concentrated

49. An earthquake measuring 8.0 _______________________.
(A) is considered minor
(B) usually causes little harm
(C) is about four times as powerful as one measuring 4.0
(D) is more than 1000 times as powerful as one measuring 4.0

50. The 1989 San Francisco earthquake _______________________
(A) measured 8.3 on the Richter scale
(B) caused little harm because it was predicted well in advance
(C) claimed about 450 lives
(D) didn’t take as many lives because of stronger buildings
